Misappropriation of assets

Fraudulent financial reporting

Misappropriation of assets

- Generally, done by the employees.
- Fraud that involves theft of an entity's assets.
- Amounts involved are not material to the financial statements. However, the theft of company assets is often a management concern because small thefts can easily increase in size over time.

Fraudulent financial reporting

- Generally, done by the management.
- intentional misstatement or omission of amounts or disclosures in the financial statements with the intent to deceive users.
- Examples:- deliberate overstatement of assets or income, omission of liabilities. Sometimes, companies may understate income to reduce income taxes.

Fraudulent financial reporting

- This can be done by Earning Management, which involves deliberate actions taken by management to meet earnings objectives.
- Earning Management has many techniques, one of them is called income smoothing in which revenues and expenses are shifted between periods to reduce fluctuations in earnings.

Fraudulent financial reporting

- Examples to income smoothing:-

Overstating inventory obsolescence in the periods they would like to reduce income.

Loss

xx

Inventory

xx

Overstating allowance for doubtful accounts in the periods they would like to reduce income.

Bad debt expense

xx

Allowance for doubtful accounts xx

Which of the following best defines fraud in a financial statement auditing context?

- A) Fraud is an unintentional misstatement of the financial statements.
- B) Fraud is an intentional misstatement of the financial statements.
- C) Fraud is either an intentional or unintentional misstatement of the financial statements, depending on materiality.
- D) Fraud is either an intentional or unintentional misstatement of the financial statements, depending on consistency.

Companies may intentionally understate earnings when income is high to create a reserve of "earnings" that may be used in future years to increase earnings. This practice is known as:

- A) performance-based management.
- B) earnings management.
- C) asset management.
- D) expense management .

_____ is fraud
that involves theft of an entity's assets.

- A) Fraudulent financial reporting
- B) A "cookie jar" reserve
- C) Misappropriation of assets
- D) Income smoothing

Which of the following is a form of earnings management in which revenues and expenses are shifted between periods to reduce fluctuations in earnings?

- A) fraudulent financial reporting
- B) expense smoothing
- C) income smoothing
- D) each of the above is correct

Who is most likely to perpetrate fraudulent financial reporting?

- A) members of the board of directors
- B) production employees
- C) management of the company
- D) the internal auditors

Misappropriation of assets is normally perpetrated by:

- A) members of the board of directors.
- B) employees at lower levels of the organization.
- C) management of the company.
- D) the internal auditors.

Three conditions of fraud

Why do people commit fraud?

Fraud has 3 conditions (fraud triangle), which are:-

1- Incentives/Pressures.

2- Opportunities:- Circumstances provide opportunities for management or employees to commit fraud.

3- Attitudes/Rationalization:- An attitude, behavior, character, or set of ethical values exists that allows management or employees to commit a dishonest act, or they are in an environment.

Fraudulent financial reporting

Pressures

Financial stability is threatened

Significant declines in customer demands.

Business failures

Pressure to meet debt repayment or debt covenant requirements

Opportunities

Some significant accounting estimates that involve subjective judgments

Ineffective control by board of directors and audit committee

High turnover of accounting, internal audit, and IT staff. (Low experience)

Attitudes

Ineffective support of entity's values

Known history of violations of laws and regulations

Management practice or personality of making overly aggressive or unrealistic forecasts

- A) Lack of controls related to the calculation and approval of accounting estimates. Opportunities
- B) Ineffective oversight of financial reporting by the board of directors. Opportunities
- C) Management's practice of making overly aggressive forecasts. Attitudes
- D) High turnover of accounting, internal audit, and information technology staff Opportunities

Financial statement manipulation risk is arguably present for all companies' financial statements. However, the risk is elevated (increased) for companies that:

- A) are heavily regulated.
- B) have foreign subsidiaries.
- C) have to make significant judgments for accounting estimates.
- D) operate in stable economic environments

Misappropriation of assets

Pressures

Personal financial obligations

Adverse relationships between management and employees

Opportunities

Presence of large amounts of cash on hand or inventory items that are small of high value

Inadequate internal control due to lack of the following:-
Segregation of duties, job applicant screening, mandatory vacations.

Attitudes

Disregard for the need to monitor

Disregard for internal control

Misappropriation of assets

Pressures

- Personal financial obligations create pressure for those with access to cash or other assets susceptible to theft to misappropriate those assets.
- Adverse relationships between management and employees. For example:-
 - Known or expected employee layoffs.
 - Promotions, compensation, or other rewards inconsistent with expectations.

SAS 99 requires auditors to maintain level of professional skepticism during the audit.

Auditing standards state that, in exercising professional skepticism, an auditor “neither assumes that management is dishonest nor assumes unquestioned honesty.”

You should not assume that management is completely dishonest or completely honest.

Assessing the risk of fraud

The concept of questioning mind.

Auditing standards emphasize consideration of a client's susceptibility to fraud, regardless of the auditor's beliefs about the likelihood of fraud and management's honesty and integrity.

There is always a risk that even an honest person can rationalize fraudulent actions when incentives or pressures become extreme.

What is the purpose of audit team brainstorming session?

The purpose is to exchange ideas and share insights from more experienced audit team members about:-

- How and where they believe the entity's financial statements might be susceptible to fraud. How management can perpetrate and conceal fraudulent financial reporting.
- How any one might misappropriate the assets of the entity.
- Fraud conditions or risk factors (incentives, opportunities, and attitudes of management and employees.
- How the auditor may respond to that.

Documenting fraud assessment

After you identified and assessed fraud risks, you need to document your findings to your audit file:-

- Discussion among engagement team about the susceptibility of the client to fraud.
- Procedures performed to obtain information necessary to identify and assess fraud risks.
- Specific risks of material fraud that were identified and a description of auditor's response to those risks.
- Results of procedures performed and reasons supporting a conclusions.
- Communications between the auditor and the management, employees with in the client, and audit committee.

Corporate Governance

- Management is responsible for implementing corporate governance and control procedures to minimize the risk of fraud, which can be reduced through a combination of prevention (deterrence) and detection measures.
- Fraud prevention (deterrence) is better than fraud detection.
- Since collusion and false documentation make detection of fraud a challenge (very difficult to detect) (but not impossible), it is often more effective and economical for companies to focus on fraud prevention (deterrence).

Which of the following is the best reason for management to emphasize fraud prevention and deterrence?

- A) collusion and false documentation make fraud detection difficult to detect
- B) collusion is impossible to detect
- C) false Documentation is impossible to detect
- D) all of the above are equally valid reasons

- Corporate governance:- some rules, guidelines, or standards that are designed to organize the relationship between owners and management because conflict of interests may arise.
- Corporate governance tries to protect the rights of owners against the abuse of management and employees by monitoring (oversight) the behavior of management and employees.

Elements or mechanisms of corporate governance to prevent (deter) and detect fraud:-

- Culture of honesty and high ethics
- Management responsibility to evaluate risks of fraud
- The role of auditors and audit committee oversight.

Overview

Research indicates that the most effective way to prevent (deter) fraud is to implement antifraud programs and controls that are based on core values embraced by the company, not just hiring highly ethical employees.

Research indicates that the most effective way to prevent and deter fraud is to:

- A) implement programs and controls that are based on core values embraced by the company.
- B) hire highly ethical employees.
- C) communicate expectations to all employees on an annual basis.

Setting the tone at the top

- Honesty and integrity by management reinforces honesty and integrity to employees throughout the organization.
- Management cannot act one way and expect others in the company to behave differently (means if management is dishonest, employees are more likely to be dishonest too and vice versa)
- Management and the board of directors are responsible for setting the “tone at the top” for ethical behavior in the company.

Creating a Positive Workplace Environment

Research shows that wrongdoing occurs less frequently when employees have positive feelings about their employer. If they feel abused, threatened, or ignored, they are more likely to engage in fraudulent actions.

A positive workplace can generate better employee morale, which may reduce employees' likelihood of committing fraud against the company.

Training

All new employees should be trained about how to apply employees' ethical conduct.

Employees should be told to communicate any actual or suspected fraud to the management.

Fraud awareness training should be tailored (designed) to employees' specific job responsibilities. For example, different training for purchasing managers and sales managers.

Fraud awareness training should be:

- A) broad and all-encompassing.
- B) extensive and include details for all functional areas.
- C) specifically related to the employee's job responsibility.
- D) focused on employees understanding the importance of ethics.

Confirmation

- Most companies require employees to periodically confirm their responsibilities for complying with the code of conduct.
- Employees should be asked to state that they understand the company's expectations and have complied with code of conduct, and that they are unaware of any violations.
- These confirmations help reinforce the code of conduct policies and also help to deter employees from committing fraud or other ethics violations.
